A Google doc is the correct way to go. It is live and can always be changed.

I agree with this, but there should be a document that is accessible with updated changes that we can refer to before shopping, and serving.

I am all for being flexible and understanding, as long as there is a way to communicate the changes so that we are all on the same page.

A simple Google document would be an easy fix, with the document shared with those who are using the kitchen.

These situations are being decided on daily.. We are in a difficult situation and need to be flexible and understanding.

That might be a CBS House committee (Ray Rokni) thing, but that's a good idea to have a modifiable living document to be able to refer to.

Anyway.. Here's the Zoom link for Sunday's meeting. BYOB.

It would be helpful if there was a live document with all policies, so everyone is on the same page. I realize this is a moving target, so it should be housed somewhere where it can be opened, with recent changes noted and dated.

Subject: Additional Kitchen policies at CBS

Men,

I just spoke with Susan Karlinsky regarding drinks at CBS for the current situation. All drinks must be individual sizes. Orange juice and water, small individual sizes. Regarding coffee, we need to buy our own coffee and use the smaller 40 cup coffee maker in the kitchen. She wants only one person assigned to pour coffee to be as safe as possible. We thought about Dunkin big boxes, but that would be cost prohibitive.

Any thoughts???

Steve Lessman
